James Jacob Kinsbury and others and Mr. Pope. Through further discussion it was developed that Mr. Kinsbury might not have been fully informed as to the facts and conditions.

Increases in remuneration of the fireman and police are in sight. Councilman M. B. Pryor introduced a resolution, one providing for a salary of $125 per month for the fire chief for the remaining four months of the year and $100 each for the members of the fireman the number of whom is not to exceed four. Ordinances granting increases for the police were ordered prepared for introduction next Monday night.

The street employees are also asking more money, members of council were informed.

Inspector James S. East appeared to ask cooperation of council in preventing overcrowding of the movie houses. Mr. East said a woman had complained to him that one of the houses was crowded to the extent that it is unsafe. Mr. East asked for an ordinance but the mayor replied that existing ordinances fully cover the situation. Various suggestions and counter suggestions were offered but the discussion ended with the mayor asking the inspector to notify the proprietors to comply with the law and then having the police see the houses to see if orders were obeyed. "If we allow overcrowding some day something is going to happen," Mr. East said, "and that is what we want to prevent."

He concluded with the assertion that if the police know that they're going to find to their business they'll do it, indicating that the proper council would be to have the mayor so instruct them.

New Suit Models—at Once Stylish and Practical

A good suit is worth every penny paid for it, said one lady to another yesterday, in the writer's hearing. At least, she continued, in my estimation, for there are days and weeks from now until next spring when the weather is much too warm for a coat and much too cool for a dress, and I do not feel happy or properly dressed unless I have my suit.

Our Suits range in price from $25 to $89.50.

Coat Fashions Hold Sway in the Fashion Section

It is a foregone conclusion that so economical, practical and stylish a garment as a coat would in these war times, receive great attention from the fashion creators and much popularity with the majority of people. So it will be a great season for coats.

Our Coats range in price from $18.50 to $75.00.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She Mixed Sulphur With It to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and lustrant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Weyl's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not what we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By coloring your hair with Weyl's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and may become beautifully dark, glossy, soft and lustrant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

THOUGHT MAN WAS CRAZ

"I have suffered from stomach trouble for years. The last year people have been calling me crazy. The doctors could not do anything for me. The worst thing I did was to press against my brain and I could not think clearly. Three months ago a friend advised taking Weyl's Wonderful Remedy and it has worked wonders in my case. All my bloating and suffering is gone and I feel as healthy as a horse." It is a simple, natural preparation that moves the bowels and cures from indigestion and all the inflammation which is usually associated with it. It is a wonderful remedy for all the ailments of the stomach and bowels. One dose will convince you of its value. A. Clark and Son, Inc., New York, N. Y.

discovery is reported of a new method of extracting oil from shales. This method is said to be much more efficient than the old method of distillation. It is said that the new method will produce much more oil from the same amount of shale. This is a great discovery and will greatly increase the supply of oil.

Scotty has done his part

Scotty was only fifteen when war came to America but he held up his right hand, a husky, fair-haired youngster from Brookline, Mass. He was so young he never did have a chance to use that shiny razor of his and they had to appoint the supply sergeant as his guardian to see that he wrote home regularly to his folks.

He spent his sixteenth birthday in the training area in France.

He knew later the cold mud of the Lorraine trenches.

He was proud because the general called his battalion the "Iron Battalion" and because his company was known as the "Indians."

At Seicheprey the "Indians" found that nothing could rattle him and that he did not know fear. They found, too, that in all the regiment none could handle a sho-sho gun quite so well as the regiment's youngest. Older soldiers were proud to serve as his feeders because they knew that no gun in all the line would fire as true as theirs—with Scotty at the sights.

But his greatest day was his last. It was one afternoon in that historic July week when his regiment chased the Germans from the Marne to the Ourcq and there fell to Scotty the chance to lie down with his beloved sho-sho at the head of a leafy, woodland path and see that not a German crossed it alive. Not one did, though thirty died in the trying before a sniper's bullet found Scotty's heart.

Now, as the "Indians" tell their tales of Scotty, their lips form this for his epitaph:

"He was a good kid and he died on his gun."

Scotty has done his part.

FRANCE

Mark and Colonel Howard occupied a small room at the end of the corridor; the clerks' room was without; between the two, accessible from each, was Kellerman's office, which communicated, in turn, with the Brigadier's.

Colonel Howard came in after a while, and they went over their plans together. They were engaged on a complicated piece of work, involving tonnage and computations of cubic feet of space for cargoes. There had been an error somewhere, and Mark was trying hard to discover it when the Brigadier came in in his usual irascible manner.

"How long will that job take, Howard?" he asked.

"Wallace will have it finished by noon, sir," answered the Colonel.

The Brigadier waved Mark to his seat impatiently. "Bring it right in to me as soon as you have the figures, please," he said. "I'll wait for it. Sure you can be through by noon?"

"I'm sure, sir," answered Mark, who was hot on the trail of the error.

The Brigadier withdrew, taking the Colonel with him for a conference. Mark worked steadily. The omission was found, the computations were balancing. A clerk knocked at the door.

"What is it?" asked Mark impatiently.

"A man to see you, sir. He says his name's Hartley. Shall I show him in?"

"Good Lord, no! I'll see him in the waiting room," answered Mark.

He looked the office door, went through the clerks' room and into the anteroom. Hartley was standing beside the window. He looked up sheepishly as Mark entered.

"Well?" asked Mark crisply.

Hartley grinned. "I didn't take the cups or the picture, Captain Wallace," he said.

"Well, what about it? What can I do for you?"

"Why, I—I wanted to tell you as much, Captain Wallace. I've sunk low, out not to theft. Only I didn't feel I could stay."

"Good Lord, man, is that all you have come to tell me?"

"Well, you see—there was something else, but—" stammered Hartley.

"Out with it, then."

"I wanted to thank you for what you did for me, and—"

The man seemed to be trying to spin out the interview for some indefinite purpose. Mark turned on his heel, his temper was not of the best just then, and Hartley was the last man in the world whom he wanted to see.

"All right," he answered. "Steer clear of that woman—of Mrs. Kennon, Hartley. It's evident that she doesn't reciprocate your feelings, or whatever they are, and she seems to have some dangerous friends about her."

He repeated suddenly, and, going forward, clapped the man on the shoulder.

"I guess you've had your troubles, Hartley," he said. "But pull yourself together, man."

The sheepish, unsmiling man dropped from Hartley's face. He caught Mark's hand impulsively.

"I'm a cur, Captain Wallace!" he cried. "I—"

"That's all right, Hartley. But, by the way, who told you my name?"

"Captain Wallace, don't ask me that! Go back! Never mind me! Go back into your office at once!" cried Hartley.

He broke past Mark with a sudden, spasmodic movement, gained the door, and ran down the corridor. Mark looked after him in stupefaction. Hartley had not been drunk, and his presence there had seemed purposeless. Suddenly, with an intuition of danger, he hurried through the clerks' office, unlocked his door, and entered.

The room was filled with a furious gust of wind. The mobilization papers were whirling on his desk. In front of the open window.

The circular fan, which had been distributing a gentle breeze imperceptibly from side to side, now poured its current of air immediately upon Mark's desk. The rotary movement had been stopped, and it had been set to maximum speed.

And this was not the small fan customarily in use in the little office, but a large one from the clerks' room.

When Mark had left to interview Hartley, he had seen Kellerman at work through the glass door that connected their two offices. Now Kellerman's desk was vacant.

Mark slammed down the window; there were two locks, and Mark and Kellerman had each a key. Nobody could have entered.

But Mark was positive that Kellerman had set the fan. It stood on a shelf against the partition. Looking up, Mark saw that there was a tiny hole immediately behind it, large enough to permit an inserted wire to push back the lever that controlled the rotary apparatus. Yet this might have been nothing but a wormhole in the wood framework of the door.

With a gasp of rage Mark hastily stopped the fan and ran back to his desk. He began collecting the papers. They had blown hither and thither; some had fallen behind the desk, some on the radiator. The floor was littered with them.

"Had any gone out of the window?" There should have been two hundred and nine. There was nothing to do but count them. Mark began, but his fingers trembled so that he could hardly turn the pages.

In the very middle of this task the door clicked; the Brigadier and Colonel Howard entered.

"Well, Wallace, finished. I hope?" asked the Brigadier with the cordiality of one who has been refreshed by a good dinner. "Let me see."

Mark turned the leaves nervously, while the Brigadier and Howard stood silently beside him.

He reached the end. He had counted exactly two hundred. That might have been an error. But the paper was not there.

He looked up to see the Brigadier peering into his face with an extraordinary expression. He heard himself stammering, fumbling for words; he stopped.

Colonel Howard sprang forward and caught him by the shoulder. "Wallace, my dear fellow, pull yourself together!" he was pleading. "What's that you're saying? Blow out of the window? It's the heat, sir. He's been overdoing it!"

"Very possibly," said the Brigadier caustically. "Pray have a look, then, Howard. Take your time."

Mark was searching again. He stopped as they came to the last paper, which was now the two hundred and third.

"It's no use, Colonel Howard," he cried. "It has gone out of the window. I was called out. When I came back the fan was turned on my desk and the papers were blowing about the room. Somebody—perhaps the mechanism slipped. I don't know. I'm tired—my God, how tired I am!"

The Colonel was pushing him into a chair. He heard the storming voice of the Brigadier a long distance away. Howard was expostulating. They were going through the papers again. A clerk had been called in. Mark heard something about searching the streets. Somebody was telephoning. And, above all, he was conscious of Kellerman in the next room, long before he opened the glass door and entered.

He was alone, and struggling back into the realization of his situation. Kellerman's threat and his refusal to consider it, the visit of Hartley, began to link themselves into the chain of the devilish conspiracy. He rose unsteadily to his feet, wiping the sweat from his forehead. Colonel Howard was coming through the open doorway from Kellerman's room.

"Sit down, Wallace," he said gravely. "I've been talking to the Brigadier, or, rather, he has been talking to me. You must consider yourself under arrest in your quarters. Now, how did this damned thing happen?"

Mark explained as lamely as one who had heard excuses of all kinds from soldiers brought before him for various offenses during his term of service, and waved them aside.

"You know what this means, Wallace?" asked the Colonel in a kindly, serious tone.

"New plans."

"Yes, but to you?"

"I guess so, Colonel Howard. And I'd like to hurry it through. Of course I shall want it over. I'll go home now, and—"

"Stop!" Colonel Howard's challenge had a triumphant ring to it. He placed his hands on Mark's shoulders and swung him round, looking straight into his eyes. "Thank God for that, Mark!" he cried. "I fought the Brigadier over you, and I'll fight him to the end of time. I told him it was a damned lie. I'll swear to it."

"What do you mean, sir?"

"That you are a frequenter of gambling houses, Wallace. That's the story that they have been putting over on him. You know whom I mean by 'they.' Washington's swimming with that crooked gang, and that story—well, they managed to start that in circulation and saw that it reached the Brigadier's ears. He heard that you were in a fight outside Mrs. Kennon's place in the small hours this morning. Mark, I'll see you through this."

TO BE CONTINUED.

W. C. C. S. WORKER HAS A BUSY JOB

All Sorts of Domestic Problems Are All in the Day's Work For Him or Her.

The adventures of the organizers of the War Camp Community Service—the men who go round to the communities near the camps, organize soldiers' clubs and get all kinds of hospitality mobilized for the benefit of the officers and soldiers—in the intervals snatched from their more routine duties of sorting out invitations to the soldiers to come and take Sunday dinner, collecting chaparrones for parties and attending to the business management of soldiers' clubs are many and of a somewhat bewildering variety.

Not long ago a little mother with a large baby draped over one shoulder journeyed to Southport, N. C., near Fort Caswell, where a soldier father was stationed. When she arrived she was taken to a snug little hotel, established by the War Camp Community Service for just such visitors. Here her husband could visit her, but there were many days when he was off duty for a few hours to camp, but couldn't cross the bay to see her. And she couldn't carry the heavy baby across the sands to the wharf to take the boat to Fort Caswell.

Every one at the Community House kept talking of the Community Organizer, so one day as she sat holding her baby and gazing wistfully over the bay the little woman had a happy thought. A few minutes later over in the Army and Navy Club the Community Organizer's desk "phone rang."

"Yes—Yes. What! A baby carriage? Great hat! That's a large order in this village. Has to have it? All right—if I can't find one I'll build one for you."

Hanging up the receiver, the Organizer sat frowning for a minute, then, registering helplessness, he telephoned his wife. On the evening of the same day a perambulator, somewhat dilapidated from a lengthy career, was wheeled up before the Community House, where a delighted little woman rushed out and put her baby in it. Now the little mother and the heavy baby visit the father every day.

Then there was the Community Organizer who received the request of a young French Canadian recruit that he be sent over the week end to a family with a baby in it because he had a baby of his own at home. Of course the Community Organizer produced the baby, with its appropriate chaparrone. What else was there for him to do? It was all in the day's work anyhow. Among the thousands of families applying every week to the War Camp Community Service in any considerable neighborhood there are all kinds—families with and families without, and every other combination that may be required. All kinds of families are kept in stock, and attending to the special wants of customers is a specialty.

One of these War Camp father confessors was asked the other day by a recruit to keep his money for him so he could not gamble it away, and many similar intimate services are rendered.

Some other unique functions are taken as follows from reports of the men and women organizers:

"Obtained license and magistrate and acted as master of ceremonies at the marriage of a soldier about to start for the front."

"Wrote letter to draft board for employee in a large manufacturing plant, who was disturbed because his number had not been called."

"Served as volunteer head of improvised day nursery during the rush of civilian visitors, warming baby's milk, putting baby to sleep, etc."

"Acted as free express and postal agent, shipping, collect, grips, suitcases, bags and parcels left to be sent to the folks back home."

There Was Something Doing.

One afternoon recently a United States ship manned by a crew of boys recently from a naval training station dropped anchor in the harbor of Southport, S. C. The boys were longing for shore leave, but there appeared to be little opportunity for entertainment in the small town that stretched along the water front. At one of the wharves was a patrol boat. One of the bluejackets waved his signal flag. A sailor on the patrol boat answered. The following conversation was wiggled back and forth:

"Anything doing in the town?"

"Sure."

"Any chance for any fun?"

"Yes. We've an Army and Navy Club."

"Then we are coming ashore."

A little later every man who could get shore leave was headed for the Army and Navy Club of the War Camp Community Service. There they surely did have fun, afternoon and evening, not only fun but an opportunity for shower baths and letter writing. For two days the Army and Navy Club was home to these boys. Without it there would have been nothing for them to do but wander in the streets.

"FRISCO" NOT TO BE USED.

Bulletins have recently been sent out by the War Camp Community Service to San Francisco requesting soldiers and sailors to refrain from using the term "Frisco," so odious to native San Franciscans. The notice has been posted on the bulletin boards of the various Army and Navy clubs and Y. M. C. A. headquarters at different posts around the bay cities.

First Woman Legislator.

To Mrs. Vikova-Kunetcka belongs the distinction of being the first woman in central Europe to be elected to a legislative body, according to Continental press reports, one of which says:

"She was present at the Prague constituent assembly on January 6, a meeting of all Czech deputies elected by the free choice of the people of the Czech lands to the four legislative bodies, the only woman in the Bohemian diet. She was deprived of her mandate by the decision of the Austrian government on the ground that the Austrian constitution does not provide for the election of women senators."

HE'S GOING TO RETURN TO HIS WORK, HE SAYS

Arthur Jones Is Now Well Man, Made So By Tanlac.

Arthur Jones, harness maker, living at 113 E. 17th Street, Erie, Pa., made the following interesting statement regarding the remarkable benefits he received from Tanlac. Mr. Jones said:

"I have suffered greatly from stomach trouble, and catarrh of the head and throat. My condition grew so bad that I have found myself in no shape to work for several months."

"I had no appetite and whatever I ate caused gas to form on my stomach and a sickening feeling followed. My nerves were all out of sorts, and I was generally run down, so much so that I couldn't sleep much at night, but have remained awake for hours at a time. I needed the sleep, too, and my condition worried me no little."

"I saw Tanlac advertised in the papers and heard some friends talking about it. I got some of the medicine and have taken it for about two or three weeks. The first dose of Tanlac helped me and I have improved steadily ever since."

"I can now sleep good at night, I have a fine appetite and I suffer no more stomach trouble or catarrh. I am a well man, and I owe it all to Tanlac. I am going to return to my work in a few days. That is what Tanlac did for me."

Tanlac is now sold in Connelville exclusively by the Connelville Drug Co., Bagley's Pharmacy, and F. H. Harmsening, where the premier preparation can be had.—Adv.

CENTER OF MANY LEGENDS

Famous Dome of the Rock, in the Holy Land, Has Long Been Held Sacred Place.

The Moslem's grief at the fall of Jerusalem is largely centered in the fate of the Dome of the Rock. For centuries devout Mohammedans have journeyed to this spot, which they count second only to the holy places of Mecca in religious significance.

Directly under the rounded dome topped with the Turkish crescent is the sacred rock about which a host of traditions—Jewish, Christian and Mohammedan—have been collected. From this rock Mohammed ascended into heaven on his steed Buraq, the lightning. Here also, it is tradition is worth anything, rested Noah's ark, and Jacob saw the angelic vision. This spot is 13 miles nearer heaven than any other on the earth, and the Turks accept the old Jewish theory that this is the center of the earth. Here on the judgment day will the angel Gabriel stand when he sounds his trumpet.

There is little room for argument over these statements. You accept or reject them as you will. But long and heated have been the learned dissertations to decide whether this identical spot, already overcovered with associations, is the site of Solomon's temple or of the tomb of Christ. Science now leans toward the former conclusion and grants that very likely the rock marks the place where stood the altar of the famous Jewish temple.

Even for a confirmed skeptic the place must hold some interest for the structure protecting the rock is a worthy rival of the Taj Mahal in beauty of design. The building is octagonal like a mosque and popularly called the Mosque of Omar, to the distress of the well informed, who point out that it is only a shrine and that the true Mosque of Omar is a small vault-like building in no way connected with the sacred rock.

Mohammedan worship is as yet undisturbed by the vicerey of the Christians, the chief difference being that the Mohammedan is now the tenant and the unbeliever the landlord.

HOUSE BUILDING IN KOREA

Operations Always Begun by the Construction of a Most Ingenious System of Flues.

When a Korean begins to build a house he first lays down a system of flues where the floor is to be. These flues begin at a fireplace, usually built in an outer shed or in a closed alleyway, connected with the house. From the fireplace the flues branch out like the ribs of a fan and end in a trench at the back of the floor space. This trench, in turn, opens into a chimney, usually built at some distance from the house. When the flues are completed the builder carefully covers them over with flagstones; he then cements the whole floor and covers it with a sort of thick oiled paper for which Korea is famous. The rest of the house is then built round the completed floor.

The heating system works in this way: When it is time to cook the rice for the morning meal the housewife lights a little straw or brushwood in the fireplace in the outer shed. While the rice is cooking the heat from the fireplace passes through the flues, heating the stone flags of the floor and diffusing a pleasant warmth that lasts until it is time to prepare the next meal. Two heatings a day generally suffice to keep the floor warm. On the floor the people sit by day and sleep by night. The heavy oiled paper that covers the floor prevents any smoke from entering the room.

U-Boat Nose Works For Liberty Loan

"NOSE" OF AUSTRIAN SUBMARINE

FROM the bottom of the Mediterranean the nose of a submarine—the U-21 of Austria—has come over here to do its bit for the enemies of Austria.

Austria didn't allow it. Austria couldn't prevent it.

An Italian destroyer sent the "fin fish" to the bottom. Italian naval engineers lifted the wreck and the Central Liberty Loan Committee of this district obtained the nose and for use of Uncle Sam's Trophy Trains which are on tour in Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia.

At every stop the train bearing the submarine nose has made it has attracted thousands of persons. As they peered through the 19-inch holes out of which the torpedoes were sent to do their bit towards destroying the commercial shipping of the world they went away feeling that the most they could do to wipe from the earth the directors of these U-boats would be little indeed.

They went away resolved to buy Liberty Bonds to their utmost.

They went away resolved that their utmost was not just to the limit of what little balance they might have in the bank—resolved that their utmost meant every cent they could save by cutting out every luxury, every non-essential.

FARM EXPERT WRITES ON 4TH LIBERTY LOAN

CORNELL PROFESSOR BELIEVES BONDS SHOULD BE BOUGHT BY RURAL FOLK.

By L. H. Bailey.

Agricultural Expert, Cornell University

The response of the farming people to the Third Liberty Loan was gratifying. It was what was expected, as soon as the question was put before the farmers directly. I hope that the Fourth Liberty Loan will be taken still more freely by the rural people.

No great war can be won in these days without the active co-operation of all the people. We contribute by giving ourselves, our business, upholding the hands of government, and loaning the government our money.

This money has been accumulated because we have prospered, and because government has protected us. The investment is the best, and the spirit that takes Liberty Bonds is the same spirit that makes good crops. The farmers' crops have saved us.

Don't Trade Liberty Bonds For Anything

We cannot think of losing this war. We cannot run the risk of an agriculture controlled by a headstrong, immoral state, such as would be imposed on us if Prussia were to succeed.

Agriculture lies at the foundation of our systems of democracy; its opinion must count in our public policies; this means that farmers must take such an active part in the maintenance of the war that they will have a right to be heard. They have taken this part thus far, and I know that they will be steadfast to the end.

Liberty Bonds stocks or bonds of doubtful organizations represented as returning a much higher income than the Bonds.

There are various other methods used and likely to be used, some of the gold-brick variety and others less crude and probably within the limits of the law. All offers for Liberty Bonds, except for money and at market value, should be scrutinized carefully. The bonds are the safest of investments and have non-taxable and other valuable features.

To hold your Liberty Loan Bonds, it is possible, is patriotic. To consult your bankers before selling them is wise.

To Complete the Illusion.

She—"No, you are too poor. If I washed dishes for a man it might make him look upon me as a servant." He—"Oh, no; you'd have to break them to do that."

Danger to Ojibway Finger.

An Ojibway Indian would not point his finger at the moon, as fair Luna would consider it a great insult and instantly bite off the offending member.

A DEAD STOMACH

Of What Use is It?

Thousands of people throughout America are taking the slow death treatment of a dead stomach.

They are murdering their own stomachs, the best friend they have, and in their sublime ignorance they think they are putting aside the laws of nature.

This is a sensational statement and it is a startling fact that the truth of which any honorable physician will not deny. These thousands of people are awaking daily huge quantities of poison and their strong age tendencies are especially to digest the food in the stomach without aid and at all from the digestive membrane of the stomach.

Most of our stomach troubles relieve distressed stomachs a few minutes they do more. Taken regularly for a few weeks they build up the run down stomach and make it strong enough to digest its own food. Then indigestion, belching, sour stomach and headache will go.

Most of our stomach troubles are sold by druggists everywhere and by A. A. Clarke who guarantees them.—Adv.
